

DRINKS ATLAS

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are living in poverty has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.6 billion (World Bank 2000).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is the rapid population growth in the developing world. The population of the world is expected to reach 8 billion by the year 2025, with the majority of the increase occurring in the developing world (United Nations 2000).

Another reason for the increase in poverty is the rapid technological change in the developed world. This has led to a concentration of wealth in the hands of a few people, while the majority of the population has become unemployed or underemployed (World Bank 2000).

There are a number of ways in which we can address the problem of poverty. One of the most important is to improve the quality of education and health care in the developing world. This will help to create a more skilled and healthy workforce, which will be able to compete in the global economy (World Bank 2000).

Another way to address poverty is to improve the distribution of income. This can be done through a number of means, including progressive taxation and social welfare programs (World Bank 2000).

Finally, it is important to address the root causes of poverty, such as corruption and poor governance. This will help to create a more stable and prosperous environment in which people can improve their lives (World Bank 2000).

In conclusion, poverty is a complex and multifaceted problem that requires a comprehensive approach. By addressing the root causes of poverty and improving the quality of education and health care, we can create a more equitable and prosperous world for all (World Bank 2000).

The World Bank has a number of programs and initiatives aimed at addressing poverty in the developing world. These include the International Development Association (IDA), the International Finance Corporation (IFC), and the World Bank Group (World Bank 2000).

The IDA provides concessional loans and grants to the poorest countries in the world. The IFC provides investment services and financing to private enterprises in the developing world. The World Bank Group provides a range of services, including policy advice, technical assistance, and financing (World Bank 2000).

There are a number of challenges facing the world in the 21st century. One of the most important is the need to address the problem of poverty. This is a complex and multifaceted problem that requires a comprehensive approach (World Bank 2000).

By addressing the root causes of poverty and improving the quality of education and health care, we can create a more equitable and prosperous world for all. This is the goal of the World Bank and its programs and initiatives (World Bank 2000).

The World Bank is committed to addressing poverty in the developing world. We will continue to work with our partners to create a more equitable and prosperous world for all (World Bank 2000).

In conclusion, poverty is a complex and multifaceted problem that requires a comprehensive approach. By addressing the root causes of poverty and improving the quality of education and health care, we can create a more equitable and prosperous world for all (World Bank 2000).

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.2 billion (UNESCO 2003).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is that the population of the world has increased. In 1990, the world population was 5.3 billion. In 2003, it was 6.1 billion. This means that there are 800 million more people in the world today than in 1990. This increase in population has led to an increase in the number of people who are illiterate.

Another reason for the increase in illiteracy is that the quality of education has declined in many parts of the world. This is due to a number of factors, including a lack of investment in education and a decline in the quality of teaching.

There are also a number of other factors that contribute to illiteracy, such as poverty and a lack of access to education. In many parts of the world, people are unable to afford to send their children to school, and many people do not have access to schools.

It is clear that illiteracy is a major problem in the world today. It is a problem that affects the lives of billions of people and that has the potential to hinder economic and social development.

There are a number of ways in which illiteracy can be reduced. One of the most important ways is to invest in education. This includes investing in the training of teachers and in the development of schools.

Another way to reduce illiteracy is to improve the quality of education. This can be done by ensuring that teachers are well-trained and that schools are well-equipped.

It is also important to ensure that all people have access to education. This means that governments should ensure that education is free and compulsory for all children.

Finally, it is important to raise awareness of the problem of illiteracy. This can be done through a variety of means, including the media and public campaigns.

By taking these steps, we can reduce the number of people who are illiterate and improve the lives of billions of people.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for mental health care in the UK. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes.

The strategy also sets out a number of objectives for the mental health services in the UK:

- To reduce the number of people with mental health problems who are admitted to hospital.
- To improve the quality of care for people with mental health problems.
- To improve the support and services available to people with mental health problems.

The strategy also sets out a number of actions that need to be taken to achieve these objectives:

- To improve the training and skills of mental health professionals.
- To improve the support and services available to people with mental health problems.
- To improve the way in which mental health services are funded.
